

IDLO Values

People focused

The ultimate beneficiaries of our work are justice seekers – the people who claim justice and seek the protection of the rule of law, although our immediate beneficiaries are often state institutions, government officials and civil society groups. We will strive to empower people and build their trust and confidence in the rule of law.

Local ownership

We recognize that reforms are most likely to be sustainable when they are owned by those whom they intend to benefit. While anchoring our work in international standards and values, we will align our assistance with local priorities, seek local support and ownership from a wide range of societal stakeholders, and work closely with local partners to meet local needs based on locally defined parameters.

Empowerment

We are committed to promote empowering solutions through capacity development and partnership-building. We foster the ability of institutions, individuals and the sector itself to deliver timely, good quality justice with an efficient use of resources. We help justice seekers to learn about their rights, asserting and using them to improve their own well-being. In so doing, we acknowledge the importance of inclusive participatory approaches.

Justice oriented

We subscribe to a vision of the rule of law that encompasses substantive justice as well as procedural fairness, and is consistent with international human rights norms and standards. We will promote and uphold our understanding of the rule of law without being prescriptive or peremptory and with sensitivity to local context.

Context specific

We will take account of the distinct nature of each situation in which we work and invest in understanding the context, including the political and social structures, any gender imbalances and human rights issues. We will seek to identify the best entry points for programmatic intervention and for policy advocacy, taking into account the political dynamics and keeping in mind the needs of the end-users of justice, especially women, the poor, marginalized and vulnerable groups.

Transparency & accountability

We recognize the importance of being held accountable for our results and the use of our resources. We will work to enhance transparency and accountability to our program partners, beneficiaries, funding partners and governing bodies. We are committed to continue reporting according to the International Aid Transparency Initiative (IATI).

Gender sensitive

We are committed to promoting gender equality through non-discriminatory gender-responsive laws and institutions, enhancing women's access to justice and increasing their legal empowerment to achieve sustainable development. We will ensure that all our programs, projects and activities are gender-informed and benefit from gender-analysis.

Legal pluralism

Although the values and standards of the rule of law are universal and must be universally respected, we accept the plurality of legal systems. We believe that it requires us to engage with all formal legal systems and where relevant also with informal or customary and community-based justice.

Human rights based

We are committed to achieve our goals through a human rights-based approach. We will follow international human rights standards and ensure that our operations are directed at promoting and protecting human rights. We will anchor our development interventions in a system of rights and corresponding obligations established by international law, to promote sustainability, empower people to participate in policy formulation and hold accountable those who have a duty to act.

IDLO Mission

“IDLO enables governments, empowers people and strengthens institutions to realize justice, peace and sustainable development. We contribute to creating stable and inclusive societies where every person can live free from fear and want, in dignity and under the rule of law.”

IDLO Vision of the Rule of Law

Our vision and mission are founded on the notion of the rule of law as embodying substantive justice and good governance as well as procedural fairness.

The rule of law is about rules, institutions and norms, the overall purpose of which is to regulate relations between state and individuals and among members of society, constrain the arbitrary exercise of power and ensure a just process.

The rule of law is also about equal protection. Affirming legal equality and impartial justice, the rule of law is concerned with the integrity of institutions and good governance.

Most importantly, the rule of law is about safeguarding rights. The rule of law protects not only procedural rights through legal supremacy, certainty and due process, but also important substantive rights through an independent and impartial judiciary and laws consistent with international human rights standards. In many countries of the world, the rule of law operationalizes human rights through constitutional and legal protections, institutions for effective implementation and accountability, judicial and administrative remedies, and the legal empowerment of people to access justice and claim their rights.

The rule of law is relevant to all three dimensions of sustainable development: economic, social and environmental. By ensuring stable and transparent legal regimes, the rule of law promotes economic development. By ensuring equal opportunity and equitable access to basic services, it promotes social development. By strengthening the legal framework to protect the environment and set regulatory frameworks for natural resource management that provide fair and sustainable development outcomes, it advances the environmental dimension of development.

Championing the rule of law as a driver of sustainable development at local and global levels

IDLO's programs, advocacy and thought leadership support the Sustainable Development Goals to advance equality, inclusion, human rights, justice, peace and prosperity.

SUSTAINING PEACE IDLO's programs work to strengthen the rule of law and promote equality and inclusion as necessary investments in stability and peacebuilding. Through institution building and empowerment strategies, IDLO seeks to address the root causes of violence and displacement.

GENDER IDLO contributes to gender equality, women's empowerment and the achievement of fair justice outcomes for women and girls through its programs, capacity development and research. IDLO advocates for women's professional participation in the justice sector, including in international fora through support to the GQUAL Campaign.

ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT IDLO promotes sustainable economic development through commercial law reforms, judicial and legal capacity development and anti-corruption initiatives.

INVESTMENT SUPPORT With pro bono private sector support, IDLO provides tailored legal expertise and capacity development to the least developed countries to attract investment and stimulate economic growth. This program has been designed in collaboration with the UN Office of the High Representative for the Least Developed Countries.

JUDICIAL INDEPENDENCE An independent judiciary ensures fair and equal treatment for all. IDLO works at national and international levels to enhance judicial capacity, integrity and independence through concrete programs, research and advocacy.
